

Cincinnati Public School's Community Learning Centers are quickly becoming a model in education reform, rising from an education system in crisis to the top rated urban school district in the state. Other states and districts have visited Cincinnati schools for inspiration in school efforts. Cincinnati CLC has also been a focal point major media attention, being featured on NBC News' Education Nation program, and many other major newspapers.

The Coalition for Community Schools has been proud to work with Cincinnati's community school since its founding in 2000. Here we have captured a set of tools and resources for local leaders that seek to adapt and replicate the Cincinnati model:

Cincinnati's Community Learning Centers In-Depth Webinar Series

Webinar 1: Building Policy Around Cincinnati's Community Schools Initiative

January 23, 2013

Building capacity for Cincinnati's award-winning community schools took the collective will of its citizens through its elected officials. Learn how city and school board policy paved the way for brand new schools and a better way of educating all of its children.

Presenters:

Annie Bogenschutz, Director of Training and Development, Community Learning Center Institute

Ohio Rep. Denise Driehaus (D-Cincinnati)

Rocky Merz, Public Information Officer, Cincinnati Board of Public Health

Download an audio recording of the webinar

Download a PDF of the PowerPoint presentation

Policy Resources:

Read Cincinnati Public Schools Guiding Principles for Community Learning Centers

Read the Board of Education's Bylaws and Policies on the CLC Initiative

Read Cincinnati Public Schools' Parameters for Partnerships

Video and Media Resources:

Video of the Coalition's Study Tour of Cincinnati Community Learning Centers

Video of local Cincinnati officials discussing the success of Community Learning Centers

MSNBC's Education Nation Case Study on Community Learning Centers

One School, One Year – American Public Media's year-long documentary of a Cincinnati community school

A Case Study on Scaling Up Community Learning Centers

A look at Cincinnati's Oyler School – the subject of several media reports including a year-long profile on the Marketplace public radio

About Cincinnati's Community Learning Centers

The Community Learning Centers Initiative started in 2000 when the Board of Education adopted a vision for a district-wide redevelopment of all schools as centers of their community. A $1 billion Facilities Master Plan was approved by the voters in 2002 with a promise that each school would be a community learning center. The foundational element of the initiative is the engagement of each school and its surrounding neighborhood in the planning, implementation and ongoing governance of its community learning centers. Another key principle is that all partnerships must be financially self-sustaining without dependence upon the school budget. The goals of the CLC are to support student achievement, revitalize neighborhoods and maximize the community's return on their financial investments. CLCs act as hubs for community services, providing access for students, families and community to health, safety and social services, as well as recreational, educational and cultural opportunities.

About the Community Learning Center Institute

The Community Learning Center Institute leads the community engagement component of the district-wide Community Learning Center initiative in the city. CLCI helps each Community Learning Center develop its partners and governance structure.

Visit the Community Learning Center Institute website

